

WE'RE IN AMERICA NOW

A visual memoir

MAY 4 · JUNE 26, 2011

Reception June 22 @ 7:30pm

In this exhibit, Sandra Brick uses the language of textiles to translate literary art to visual art. She plays with the cliché, “Can a picture paint a thousand words?” The words belong to her husband, Fred Amram, who, in story excerpts, explores his experiences as a Jew in Nazi Germany and his adapting to a new culture in the United States as an outsider.

Join us Wednesday evening, June 22, at 7:30 p.m. as Amram reads from his work and the couple explores how visual art and literary art intersect. Amram and Brick will be available starting at 6:30 to lead tours through the exhibit and to answer questions.
